The material in this book has been gathered from published works on English heraldry; local histories; state, church, county and city vital and court records; and accounts sent in by our many good friends and helpers who had access to family Bibles and journals; or had personal knowledge of facts.

This tabulation is set down in accordance with the information we have been able to discover during nine years of research.

It is generally acknowledged that no genealogy of this proportion might be perfect. There may be errors in this.

All we can say is that we did the best we could.

FOREWORD.

Since the day over seven hundred years ago, when by British law, the sons of Tomkyn the Saxon, took the name of their father as a surname, we have grown to be an innumerable multitude.

From the ancient and historic town of Lostwithiel, in Cornwall, where we as a clan came into being, we have spread to the ends of the earth,

Through seven centuries we have taken part in many enterprises of peace and war. Our name appears in the chronicles of church and state in many lands. The roster of the arts, sciences and professions bears witness that we have done our part in these. And their name is legion who lived quieter lives in their own localities, engaged in their various occupations throughout the British Empire and the Americas.

We of the two greater American branches, descend from pioneers who came in the very earliest days. We were in New England in 1635, and in Virginia at even an earlier date.

We helped in no small way to build the sister nations of Canada and the United States, and took prominent part in the government and development of these new lands. And today, from Nova Scotia to California- from Alaska to Florida and in farther lands, you will find us- thousands of us- and tens of thousands of good people allied to us by marriage and bearing other names.

We may scan these pages with a pardonable pride, and look back for almost a thousand years upon a sturdy, straightforward and honorable race, that shall, God willing, endure so long as the world shall be.

ARMS AND CRESTS.

Our coat of arms is described as follows: Arms azure, on a chevron or., between 3 moorcocks close or., as many [3] crosses crosslet sable. There are several crests:

Tomkins of England, out of a ducal coronet, a broken battle axe

Tompkins of Hereford, a unicorn's head erased, per fess, arg., and or., armed and maned, gorged with laurel wreath vert;

Tomkins of Sussex, a ship under full sail;

Tomkins of Webley, a lion rampant, holding a broken tilting spear, arg;

Another crest, probably of the Cumberland branch displays seven broken arrows in place of the battle axe or spear.

These symbols denote that our ancestor, Toen the Saxon, by whose qualities we inherit the right to these devices, was a Crusader; that he held high military rank or performed some outstanding feat of valor; was first over the rampart in an assault, and that he died in battle.

There are three mottoes:

Martis non Cupidinis- Mars not Cupid;

Ne magnum nisi bonum- Nothing is great that is not good;

Principiis obsta- Resist in the beginning.

TABULATION.

1. Thom the Saxon, who, the legend says, came to Britain with William the Conqueror, and fought in the Battle of Hastings.

had

2. Toen of Cornwall ba. 1070, and as indicated by heraldic symbols died in Palestine. All authorities on English heraldry concede that we are descended from a Crusader. The proof that there was one named Toen lies in the fact the early records of Cornwall name as of three generations Toenchen, Tonkin, and Tomking. Toenchen means the younger. If there was a younger named Toenchen, there was of course an elder named Toen. The Germanic diminutive "chen" is the English equivalent "kin" and part of our patronymic. Bishop Baldwin and Giraldus recruited men in Cornwall for the Crusade.

2. Toen
had
3. Toenchen ba. 1095 named in early records,
4. Thom. There had to be a man named Thom in this or the closely following generation, from whom the surname of Thom was taken, and which surname now numbers many thousands. No evidence that this was the identical

Thom, but the name is placed here to show how we are very probably related to Thom, Tom, Tomes, as well as Thomas, Thomson, Thompson, Tomlin and Tomlinsons. Some authorities also include the Toombs family as descended from this line, which is quite possible.

3. Toenchen
had
5. Tonkin ba. 1125, and named in early records, as son of Toenchen.

5. Tonkin
had
6... Tonkin ba. 1155. Not named in the records we saw, but there had to be a Tonkin of this approximate time from whom the families bearing that surname descends, or that of Tonkins and Tonkinson.
7. Tomking ba.1155, named in old records as son of Tonkin. The "m" sound continues in all this line.

7. Tomking
had
8... Tomlin ba. 1190. There had to be a man named Tomlin born about this time, from whom the families of Tomlin and Tomlinson descend, and which family took this as a surname about 1240 per English law. No proof that he was son of Tomking but probably he was.
9. Tomkyn or Tomkyns ba. 1190. There had to be one of that name at this time from whom our surname was taken.

9. Tomkyns of Lostwithiel
had Tomkyns, all members of which family took surname,
10. Robert of Charlton ba. 1240 da. 1300. This is the first we find bearing a surname.

From this point on, all bear surnames. All data is taken from records of church or state. It is interesting to note that when this man's family was growing up, Marco Polo returned from his travels in China.

10. Robert Tomkyns of Charlton had Tomkyns
11. Alan of Apley ba. 1255
12. Thomas of Hereford ba. 1260, Bishop of Hereford.
13. John of Charlton ba. 1265 d. 1353. This man's will is on file.

12. Thomas Tomkyns of Hereford
had Tomkyns of Hereford,
14. Adam ba. 1330. No doubt is the same Adam Tomkyns mentioned as having trouble with Sir Hugh Wrottlesby in 1363.
15. William ba. 1327, will dated 1398, Vicar of Budbroke and Estlemyngton. These families were living during the Black Plague which devastated Britain and other parts of the world.
16. Roger,

13. John Tomkyns of Charlton
The records we saw re this group, seem to have omitted an entire sheet or more, for it goes on to say: Robert of Charlton ba. 1560 m. Emma Hardy. He is also called Robert Charlton Tomkyns. He had
John b. London 1614, d. May 29 1695 at Ludford, Herefordshire. m. 1st Dorothy Blundell, and had by her 4 sons and 3 daughters. Emma, his daughter, m. Sir Francis Cornwallis, Then John as above m. 2nd Lettice Waring and had 1 daughter. No doubt many of the present families of England are descended from this line, and once we find the English connections, probably all of the isolated groups now in America, will trace back to this family. Obviously this family descends from Robert Tomkyns of Charlton ba. 1240, perhaps through his son John of Charlton ba. 1265. Apparently the family were of Charlton for several generations.

15. William Tomkyns of Hereford, Vicar of Budbroke and Estlemyngton
had
17. William of London ba. 1360, mentioned in a will 1396

41. Ralph Tomkins and Hannah Aborne
had Tomkins
67. Martha m. John Foster widower of her sister Marie.

There are debated points regarding John and Nathaniel, sons of Ralph Tomkins. Some consider there were two others having these names, at this time. In certain instances court records seem to indicate one or both of these resided at Salem. While New York records state they lived in that state. From known facts we believe these men were sons of Ralph Tomkins as shown herein.

42. Nathaniel Tomkins and Cecelia Waller had Tompkins of London
68. Robert ba. 1627.
69. Ann m. Sir Frederick Hyde, Kt., Chief Justice of South Wales.
